

ERRING ON THE SIDE OF CAUTION

Whereupon illegal immigration becomes a clear and present risk and danger, the identification of those vulnerabilities is crucial to harm reduction. While internal stimulation may cause immediate alarm and if prolonged may cause actual injury, caution must be exercised in taking medical advice unless multiple trusted doctors were consulted. Some procedures in medicine are in fact antiquated; sometimes a trip to the country, like other old remedies, may work better for those sources of aggression may not endure in the time away. However, in the practice of work in daily life, oftentimes such a vacation may not be possible and may yet be the resolution. Consultation with friends and family in these times of the pandemic may yet reveal subtler solutions not yet understood.

The matter of social position and holding strong remains an item of many facets and aspects. The movement from unique and hard earned positions should be avoided except in exceptional circumstances. Pressure from different sides may yet advance on each one of us, but if to move means to cede one's own, or to let go of those under one's care, then strength in numbers should be examined as an avenue to greater capacity to resist and defend.

While many persons may find at first succumbing under pressure were the easiest way out, sideways communication with those of similar or like circumstances could always discover the exercise of repetition that raises the alarm. If changing pressures are from the external environment, and the scenario seems bizarre and requisite of attention, consider filing a police report by each level of police or at least attempt communication with officers who are open to revealing what they know from years of experience.

NEW ARRIVALS TO CALGARY

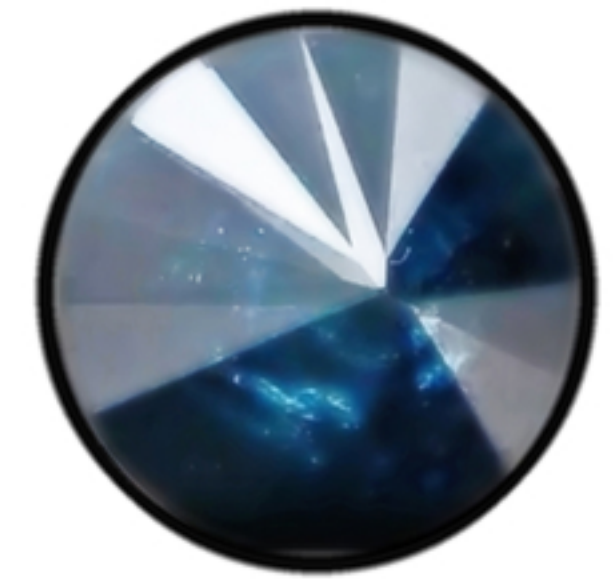

Amongst the new arrivals to Calgary's public scene, the most notable have been the scattering arrival in support of the Apollo astronauts. While already at retirement age, their presence continues to be of such extraordinary interest that people young and old seeking avenues to contribute to outer space development and patriotic contributions to society remain rooted in their dedication to the persistence of memory by the Apollo space efforts. That the astronauts are gracing this city with their presence has generated excitement with great interest across all dimensions of society.

The present public relations projects by the current NASA administration is not exclusive to outreach and inhouse education programs, apps and video feeds, and camera shoots of young astronaut candidates. They also include in person in situ interactions that seek to create new opportunities and retain existing talents. That at least one high school in Calgary has a space program, and that astronaut Chris Hadfield continues to advance in public spheres including in person meetings and books mean that Canadians are becoming informed of the potential of outer space development.

In face of increasing interest and post success of the CANADARM, Dr Aldrin and Dr Armstrong are seriously considering the creation of a position of internship for one or a few candidates who may have the strength of mind and body to withstand not only the training program, but actual trials of space. Also, more than one project and several funding opportunities are now surfacing directly related to development in Canada.

UNUSUAL NUMBERS IN INFLUX FROM ASIA

Alarm has been raised concerning the general influx of persons of yet determined origins from the continent of Asia between 2012 and present. For their arrival was gradual despite that the influx would be considered rapid and abrupt from the perspective of Immigration, no particular response was elicited from local communities. Nevertheless, alarm was raised recently due to the fact that internal stimulatory actions have been detected to increase drastically. It is unknown what proportion of the immigrants of unknown status was capable of such actions, but the reports place the overall number at around 15,000.

The intention behind the influx has been reported to be that of appropriation of properties and positions, with the most alarming action being that of the illegitimate and possibly violent appropriation of properties and teams to realize a number of condo projects that could convert into cash. The debilitation of local capacities led to the building activities with the less than full approval by the public, but the extents to which coercion did occur are being presently investigated. To protect the skyscrapers and other vertical architecture from appropriation and illegal sales, a founding document that gives expression to the definite meaning in application of heritage and aspiration was penned.
