

SHIFTED FRAME

If the world did change or is changing faster than we are accustomed to, we never did note very well those who kept track. For one reason or another, some people with working knowledge have lost their positions because gains and profits have overtaken the view for societal good. One of the most difficult subjects in the search for knowledge, for a variety of reasons, is that of war. Despite that many organizations exist to maintain against conflicts, occasionally emerges new forms of conflict never before seen. For this and other reason, international law exists to safeguard the legality of warfare. Deep knowledge of the history and content of warfare informs the evaluation of new forms of conflicts for identification and understanding of their nature and then their legality. As nation-states are a governing principle for the global community, nation-states and their governments remain an authority consultable on legality of warfare and whether such may be sanctioned. Despite that geopolitics is complex, it is no reason to relegate the authority of longstanding societal structures.

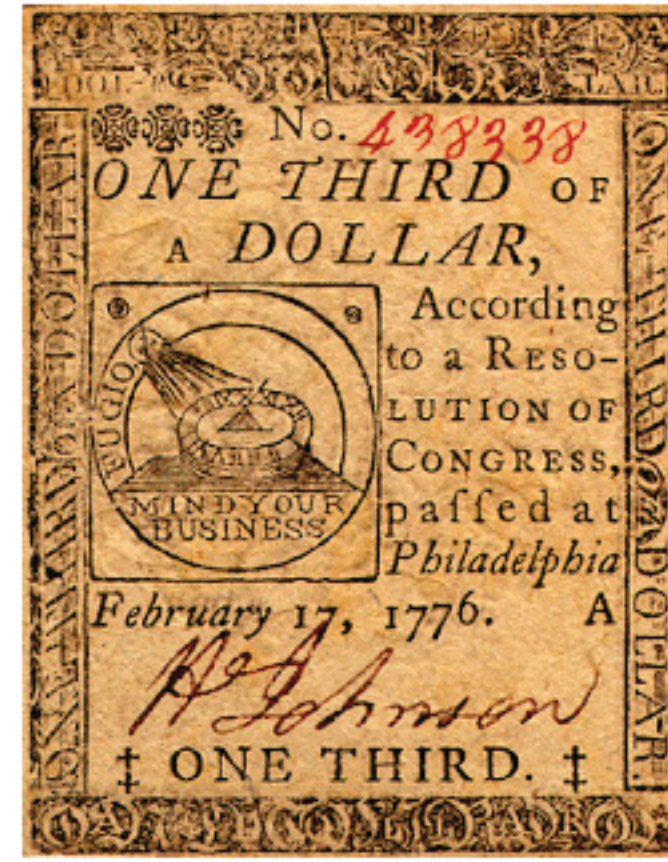

TO WTC OR NOT WTC

Reporting of the death toll from 2001 at the 911 site in New York continues online in the present year of 2023. The site, once paved over with a modest light grey-white concrete, now houses a memorial and a tower named variously, along with the best looking subway station in the city. All this did follow respectable proposals from different people quietly published in journals and other publications which were then reviewed for intelligence. There was democratic decision and international interest that set the stage for the architecture. It remains regrettable to many that beyond the losses of important persons, also lost were countless documents in so many file cabinets that would be helping negotiation into the future. Debate begins for maindesk, outpost, and or settlement for the personnel.

FLY HIGH

It is upon high that the forefathers imagined in mind and life the future which perhaps never did find modern recognition of the utmost dedication and optimism. If Congress was new once, it must have been like the ancient Greek forum in that it held the strength of philosophy and the stage for civil conversation. In the present we are always in motion into the future, and for this reason, the state has always been the future state, and so the Congress is always new - the Congress is always the future Congress. It is the regard for the establishment, not more than knowing it shall house, and will always house, but it is those who stand tall, who shall speak, and legislate, and transact business, in that house who shall receive our regard and our hopes which too come from life in practice and in philosophy. In the regard is all the reservation from the knowledge that there is a world, and each is one in the world, and so am I, that brings this moment to the action to reach out with the soul towards that which Jefferson calls "the esteem of the world."

COMMUNITY

Without a doubt, the arrival to the present through many challenges shows a history filled with triumphs. The making of currency is no isolated experiment gone right but situates in what we now know to call economy. Knowledge endures in history and minds, and in what surrounds. Post pandemic recovery must recall what trust is. Trust is slowly built through transactions that start with interaction leading to transactions or common work. Legal tender was earlier documentation of trade then usable in another trade. Cooperative actions led to cooperatives and commerce. History points to the creation of trust.

CORNELL OF IVY

A notice surfaced between January and February of recent deaths of Cornell alumni young to old. Although odd calls to close the campus persist, the campus remains alit with activity both scholarly or research oriented and practical or political. Resistance to the disappearance of academy will be sought only if the recollection of the meaning and practice of scholarship through humility and devotion is founded. The heritage and legal ownership of Cornell is a clue.

DOUBLE EDGED

Currents of long distance travel do pace now in instantaneous motion. Rethinking the expenditure caused by unannounced arrivals and even disorganized departures will lose nothing of the human nature. The picture of humans in constant traffic now known to be somewhat overromanticized, corporations at risk of losing their souls will not come to limiting profits for flights that uptake much fossil fuel. The stress of local communities as though resting in contemplation do rise like smoke in a chimney. The custom proven in history of bringing gifts and one's own wealth after much careful enquiry struggles to survive in the disinformation. Power relentlessly sought against authority long elected in places where stakes for the new world are high puts so many at risk. The differences in culture and knowledge will not subside by force even with the best of intentions. Leaders continue to scramble for their own people.

REIMAGINING PLACE IN HISTORY

To persist and endure, the world we have created in our own land is the seasons like dip and rise and reach fruition, soon, we are saying. Of the revolutions the grandest of all the ones of the celestial planets; sometimes unseen, their motions like clockwork reveal to us the order and ratio, the geometry of God. In God we trust, wrote on the most denominated unit of the economy, the dollar. We still have the dollar. To question is to human, but doubt alone shall not erase the history, spanning years, and decades, and centuries. Memory of strong shall return. No one will be locked in a cubicle running after digital numbers, and now we are taking to the streets of the American Dream. No negation of our dream shall be possible, for it is I, and I am one, and We are the People, and We are Strong. Nobody will option away my golden years, nor my present, nor my friends, nor all the things my father and grandfathers and all of they did labor to make. We will fight on our own terms, and we shall not lose a single thing.

THE SIGHTING OF ANDY WARHOL

In 2022, Andy Warhol was sighted near the Glenbow Reservoir with his characteristic hairstyle and stoic demeanor. COVID-19 was still raging, yet this man, an artist first of all, visited our humble frontier town proper. A man was next to him, though they were not talking. It was mid afternoon, and not a particularly brilliant day. It was possible passerbys, for there were a few, did turn to look, but nobody wanted to draw attention to themselves. It was around this time that there was a sale of Warhol's work reported by the Globe and Mail. No publication noted his in-person presence in Calgary. Around this time, curious New Yorkers also began to make appearance in this town. There was a suggestion to rethink Campbell soup.

TELEPHONING IVY

Any profile of the universities of the Ivy League would note the development of the university through ten centuries in which the challenges of scholasticism were faced at different points in time. The Ivy League remains universities that can trace its development from European universities and discover within themselves the new hope of original thinking without losing the lessons hard fought throughout the history. A note was discovered unsent to Oxford seeking advice on whether and where some point of convening in the common before mentioned interest of the Ivy League may happen. Much organization and argument may be forecasted at campuses before convening may occur.

COINTELLIGENCE?

Of renewal spirit, by the current smiling president Joe Biden, whose works do prove his fitness for presidency, who moves nimbly like the president two terms ago, the country is beginning to hear calls to action. Dawning onto Americans is that nobody had ever wanted the helm who succeeds in leading for it is themselves, in their calm recollection, who constitute the country and who takes the right actions to right the country. Up we go, tells us the Apollo astronauts, and by their leadership too the world will rise with us albeit at their own pace and in their own ways. The gaze now shifting back to our own lands and peoples, too has risen the worry of those of us who have been overseas for awhile. Onset of creativity for the issues of the day around each one is on the horizon. Law and order never doubted, rounds back in scrutiny of the unacceptable. Even the word of agency is making a reappearance to rescue that old philosophy of human agency. If nobody will come to our rescue, we shall rescue ourselves, heard murmured on the subway. Victory shall be ours, sings the innocents in search of the greater happiness that is that virtue.
