

Being for a purpose

The commonality between men was held in trust over the union of the foundation of what created in times throughout the raising and the falling did find what before was already known. What assembly had formed and disbanded, lost and recovered, regularly discussed or intermittently gone was always celebrating the union of men. Thought it was that it was for those functions of realizing together the realities sought, so between times at certain moments erupted were events beyond the expectation of any man, woman, or child. It is nature, the philosopher said, that trickles through the moments that were real, and even the moments when the unfavorable occurred, in those moments too nature stood guard. For the water that trickled, for the water that splashed, for the grass that rise, and for the mountains that stood. If before nothing was known, and then all that could be known must already reach possession, then later, some time later when this truth shall come upon us, we will have stood guard as all those who did before did so without question and without doubt. Today, nature is she who must be guarded and defended. What small and petty differences were there before could be nothing but a quirk in that nature perceptible. For in these days where doubt could raise itself at those odd moments when anger too calls, the moment is the present where that chance for faith yearns for the response from the nobility of the soul. Not all is permanent, and not all shall always stand. Heard between the sounds of the birds and the winds, the whales and the elephant, and heard in the inner chambers of the heart, is that call to raise and elevate from the petty differences and find the union that shall save Earth.

ARR.

On the discovery that there would not exist an earth without our care.
(Photo courtesy: World Wide Web)

CLASSIFIEDS

CALL

Seeking submissions in articles, news, ideas, info, intel, and all that is extra-ordinary.

email: LYRA@nspace.one

The EXCITING TIMES is created towards the establishing of LYRA, an association of Canadian-Americans settled in Canada. It is published with a mission to inform and inspire.

Executive editor: Ann Lee
Copyrighted April 2, 2023

EXCITING TIMES

HOW LARGE THE WORLD

The cartography of the world began its issue centuries ago; almost an eon ago the effort did begin. The scrolls from that distant past are still kept today and their preservation will remind us that the design and substance of realization is vast, though not as vast as the terrains and oceans in which only scarcely is it occupied. The complexity of the made world is already at such that it is becoming impossible nearly to imagine falsely that the world could be comprehended in a life time. Deliberation for sufficient management is an endeavor that today calls the most intelligent and resourceful to task. Those in communication after close contacts and decisions were maintained are at high engagement while recruitment of talent and support continues with the resistance to the unusual motions which already in the previous century were reported to be at ever higher speeds. The notion that the geopolitical stations in place with its peoples, such as in cities, in towns, in a country, reveals that the reliance by those highly engaged of all those within their locations is becoming more and more important. The call to stand guard is the call to be the best we can be, wherever we are, and invoking, the dream is to protect the world we have built together throughout times in order to protect the planet Earth.

COSMOS OF ORDER

What was the lost treasure from the time when the word of "cosmos" was realized into both the spoken and the written? What is the cosmos, signified by the starry skies up above but forgotten so easily by those of us upon the earth that feeds and nourishes us. History has a way of telling many stories, but then in this moment we call present where we presence as individuals and with one another, as one, we each realize the cosmos which is ourselves as being within a grander being that is called loosely existence. In the world we live in, we live in an order made of so many orders, through which our navigation is daily and too from moment to moment. The subscription to orders in society and even in nature cannot become mundane but must remind us frequently that within these little cosmos is the principle that it is of truth and grandeur, and more especially, they are too created, and within its potential to be and to transform yet we are within is the secret of the motive of life.

LYRA CONCERNED

The presentation of The Exciting Times by LYRA has reception from citizens from north and south of border. The novel fare is a concern for LYRA because continuation of new format in a new publication had proven difficult in journals published in Europe and America middle late last century.

RE-SPEC FRONTIER

To the verge, the call sounded and those who would make it a mission answered. The history made, and the memory made. Infrastructure was not yet a word then, but the establishments, starting modestly, did grow. The one room bank, the small party for game, finally, the general store that held all the supply which made the reserve for the "public". In all these times when conflicts were resolved over decades, those who choose to remain remember how incredible the outcome was, peace. Were there a sustained period of peace, perhaps consumerism and adoptions from the global market did bring to the forefront the new challenges of incorporating the new. The call today, politically incorrect, is for "human resource," which is a poor term to name recruitment for citizenry.

INTEL/LIGENT

If the state of the academy today permits its existence to exit the institutions that had given it form in the past centuries, those with the loyalty to hold steadfast to American scholarship are people with great responsibility. Yet, the call by the nation to bring light to the demands whereby the world is held in balance is like those calls before that require heroism and the courage to serve the country. The removal from the momentum of academia requires the comprehension of news and local conditions. Workgrouping is the day's affair.